

Travel

This Jersey Shore is washed by the waves of the Susquehanna. N4

In the West Bank, a visitor finds nuance in a polarized region. Personal Journey, N3

This sure is one cool presidential birthplace

Aloha from Barack Obama's Hawaii, a largely color-blind paradise free of drama. Take an "Obama tour" and see how the islands shaped the man.

By Anne Z. Cooke
McCLATCHY-TRIBUNE SERVICE

HALEIWA, Oahu — If you've vacationed in Hawaii, you know the come-hither scent of flowers, the trade winds cooling the peaks, and the warmth of the Southern Ocean.

Now imagine growing up here, where Barack Obama was born, exposed from the first to a culture where the impossible has evolved: a multiracial society, tolerant of differences and busily pursuing the delights and challenges of daily life.

For people still wondering why Obama stays cool, thinks things through, and keeps an eye focused on peaceful solutions, look toward the 50th state. The "aha!" clues to the man have been right here all along, waiting to be mined.

Obama's background is an open book, writ large on the pages of Hawaii. Hawaiian islanders are color-blind from the cradle. The blend of races and cultures here, at work, at play, in school, and in every neighborhood has been a fact since Westerners arrived to mix with Hawaiians, and the Japanese and Chinese came to work in the sugarcane fields.

Not that there aren't problems. Caucasians applying for work are often passed over in favor of local residents. Chinese Hawaiians stick together. Look twice at a newly arrived Samoan and he or she will give you the "stink eye."

But my lasting memories are of people unhurried enough to stop and explain why this or that restaurant serves the best huli huli chicken. Of passersby who sketch a map to show you the quickest route to Haleiwa. Or of folks who face problems with equanimity and solve

See HAWAII on N5

Hiking trails near Kapalua in West Maui have long offered a break from the beach, an option sought by increasing numbers of visitors since President Obama's election in 2008. Since then, tour companies have added "Obama tours" of places connected to the president. CAROL PUCCI / Seattle Times

Hawaii's one cool presidential birthplace them without drama. Michelle Obama said it best: "You can't really understand Barack," she told an interviewer, "unless you understand Hawaii." If you've been there, you know what she means.

HAWAII from N1

Before the 2008 presidential campaign, travelers spent their time at the beach, rarely visiting Honolulu's inland neighborhoods. Since the election, however, a half-dozen tour companies have added an "Obama tour," focusing on places connected to the president.

The homes where his mother and grandparents lived; Kapiolani Hospital, where he was born in 1961 (see his birth certificate at www.obamasneighborhood.com); the corner market where he stopped on the way home from school; the park where he and his friends played basketball; and Punahou, his high school.

Go online for a photo of Obama's kindergarten class (www.obamasneighborhood.com). Lined up and smiling are five white children, seven mixed-race children, 12 full or mixed-origin Asian children, Obama, and three Japanese American teachers. For these kids, the world looked international before they could read.

Think of their class picnic, the buffet table laden with parents' contributions: spaghetti, pizza, teriyaki chicken, plate lunches, potato salad, spam musubi (American Japanese), chow mein, malasadas (Portuguese), and huli huli chicken (Hawaiian).

"Do you think people are as color-blind as they seem?" I asked Darlene Morikawa, formerly with the State Tourism Office.

The president made a Hawaiian "hang loose" gesture with diners at an Orlando restaurant in September. Orlando Sentinel

"Just about everyone here has inherited what I call potluck," she said. "We're proud of our individual heritage, but we're Hawaiian first and foremost. That's where we get our identity, our sense of who we are. I happened to catch Oprah when her guests, African Americans mostly, were talking about how it mattered if you were more brown, or less brown, or almost white. It really surprised me. I didn't know that people on the mainland thought about color like that."

My advice? After you've taken the tour, poke around on your own. Explore the island — in the spirit of research, of course. Leave the hotel pool and head to the world's largest ocean. Float on the swells. Embrace the waves.

Rent a car and drive the island. Pass up the submarine rides, booze cruises, and national-franchise hamburger joints. Instead eat at cafes patronized by kama'aina (local Hawaiians). Try that most revered Hawaiian fast food, the plate lunch. A treat when an expert makes it (and a dog otherwise), it's a basic food group. Obama likes the Rainbow Drive-

As a student, Obama left his name in the sidewalk outside the Punahou School cafeteria in Honolulu. CHUCK BERMAN / Chicago Tribune

In, whose website proclaims, "For 45 years, Rainbow Drive-In has served the most ono grindz (pidgin for delicious food) to Hawaii and the World."

I prefer the barbecue chicken plate lunch, with macaroni salad and rice. The Ifuku family, owners of Rainbow, at 3308 Kanaina Ave., supports local scholarships and school supplies, something to think about as you open your wallet. See their menu at www.rainbow-drivein.com.

My favorite lunch item is saimin, served at Zippy's, one of Obama's hangouts. To chicken broth soup, they add saimin noodles, char siu pork, wontons, eggs, green onions, and bok choy. I haven't eaten at Alan Wong's, famous for Hawaiian regional food, at 1857 King St., but I'm told Obama eats there on special occasions.

If you're staying in a Waikiki Beach hotel, walk southeast toward Diamond Head, to Kapiolani Park and beach. Local families picnic on the sand, swim in the waves, and sun on this stretch of shoreline. The grassy side, named for Queen Kapiolani, is Hawaii's oldest public park, founded in 1875. The grounds include the Waikiki Shell (site of free evening concerts), a zoo, tennis courts, soccer fields, and enough space to fly a kite. Bring a beach towel and a picnic basket, and dine to music. Obama picnicked here with his grandparents and more recently with his own children, and the Secret Service.

To swim with the locals, head to Kailua Beach County Park, on Oahu's southeast shore. Here's where the Obamas and friends have vacationed together, in two adjoining rented houses. Some streets have public parking, but do observe kapu (taboo) signs, usually posted on private driveways. Even Hawaiian tolerance has limits. Stop at Sandy Beach to see where Obama still bodysurfs, but don't get into the water yourself. Famous for treacherous undertows, Sandy chews up novices.

For a luau you'll never forget, pass up the overcrowded event your hotel organizes weekly and look instead for a church- or charity-sponsored event. These parties are unhurried, visitors are welcome, and you'll get a chance to talk to real Hawaiians. Which is just what it's all about.

the Reeperbahn red-light district, offers some very, er, creative ways to stuff a stocking. Let's just say these presents are hot enough to melt the North Pole. Who knew elves could be so naughty?

www.hamburg-tourism.de/en/

To comment, e-mail TravelTalk@phillynews.com.

Foreign Exchange

What a U.S. dollar buys (in commercial trades; consumer rates may be lower).

Country	Nov. 15	Year ago
Australia (dollar)	0.97	1.00
Austria (euro)	0.78	0.74
Belgium (euro)	0.78	0.74
Britain (pound)	0.63	0.63
Canada (dollar)	1.00	1.03
Denmark (krone)	5.87	5.53
France (euro)	0.78	0.74
Germany (euro)	0.78	0.74
Greece (euro)	0.78	0.74
Hong Kng (dollar)	7.75	7.79
India (rupee)	54.79	50.96
Ireland (euro)	0.78	0.74
Israel (shekel)	3.91	3.73
Italy (euro)	0.78	0.74
Japan (yen)	81.21	76.95
Mexico (peso)	13.24	13.72
Netherlands (euro)	0.78	0.74
Norway (krone)	5.76	5.82
Portugal (euro)	0.78	0.74
Singapore (dollar)	1.22	1.30
Spain (euro)	0.78	0.74
Sweden (krona)	6.77	6.81
Switzerland (franc)	0.94	0.92
Turkey (lira)	1.80	1.82

Inns & Resorts Directory
TO ADVERTISE CALL: 215-854-5328
FAX: 215-854-5572

CARIBBEAN

ST. MAARTEN
www.beachsidevillas.com
OCEANEDGE, LUXURY 1, 2, 3 BR A/C Villas.
Daily housekeeping, free Wi-Fi cable TV.
Call Owner Yolanda 313-884-7706

NEW YORK

RIVERSIDE TOWER HOTEL
Single Room $124; Double Rm $129; Suites $139-$159. Lincoln Center area, Hudson River views, 18 flrs, kitchenette. 5 min to midtown, safe, quiet, luxury area. Riverside Tower, Riverside & 80th St. For more info. or brochure call 1-800-724-3136 or visit www.riversidetowerhotel.com

SOUTH CAROLINA

SEABROOK ISLAND
Near Charleston, SC. Pristine Beaches, Pet Friendly, Resort Amenities. 888-718-7949
www.SeabrookExclusives.com