

- Subscribe to Times Union
- Subscriber Services
- Advertise With Us
- Get TV Weekly Magazine

timesunion.com Businesses

- Home
- News
- Sports
- Business
- Opinion
- Entertainment
- Living
- Blogs
- Jobs
- Real Estate
- Cars
- Classifieds
- Index ▼
- FIND & SAVE

A place to elevate your expectations

High in the Andes, Ecuador boasts dramatic landscapes, charming urban areas

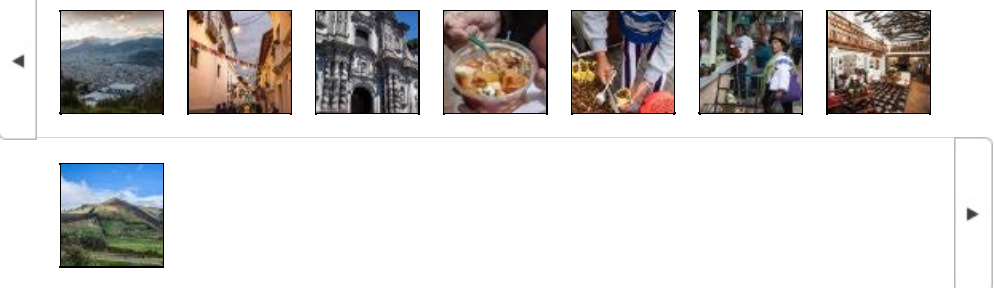

By Anne Z. Cooke

Published 4:06 pm, Thursday, May 1, 2014

◀ PREV NEXT ▶

The nearly two million residents of Quito, Ecuador, fill the narrow valley of the city. (Steve Haggerty/MCT) ORG XMIT: 1151843

Tweet 0

Like Pin it

Larger | Smaller Email This

A pint-sized dish of cevichocho, served on the street in Otavalo, sparked one of those "ah-hah" moments so unexpected it caught me unawares.

By the time the three of us parked near the

FEATURED VIDEOS

Photo Galleries

Local photos

National photos

Weather photos

LATEST NEWS

Fahy, McDonald, Steck call for stricter oil train laws

LATEST ENTERTAINMENT NEWS

Casey Kasem, king of the Top 40 countdown, dead

Top Jobs

Medical Assistant

Instructor/Coordinator Columbia-Greene Community College is seekin... more »

Special Education Teacher

Queensbury Elementary School is recruiting quality applicants for ... more »

Latest News

Fahy, McDonald, Steck call for stricter oil train laws

Poll: Slow Common Core

Deputies: Warren County girl stabbed mother

LeBrun: Cocktail of liquor laws distilled

if street food was a good idea. Still, I was curious. And hungry.

"Do you really want to try it?" Aguilar asked, raising his eyebrows. A veteran guide, he knew tourists were squeamish about street food. And in Ecuador, ceviche was the street version of a Big Mac. "If you're sure," he said doubtfully.

Deftly piling chopped red and yellow tomatoes, toasted popcorn, red onions, white lupine beans and cilantro in the bowl, he filled it full. Then he sprinkled lime over the mix, doused it with extra juice from the tomatoes, topped it with bits of sliced chicken and handed it over.

I hesitated, took a bite, and it was ... heavenly! No wonder those kids look so healthy, I said to myself. They're snacking on vegetables.

"What did I tell you?" my husband, Steve, said, grabbing a photo. "Ecuador isn't anything like Kansas."

Ask me about the European settlement of North America and I can quote chapter and verse. But ask about Ecuador's cultural heritage or colonial history, and I'm lost.

Where then, in this country on the Equator, would a traveler find links to the past? Living links, too, not museum exhibits. We started in Quito, the capital, because this is where most flights arrive. And Quito is old, founded in 1534, just 42 years after Columbus discovered America. Perched at 9,000 feet elevation on a hill between the east and west ranges of the Andes Mountains, it lies at the foot of Guagua Pichincha, 15,820-foot high and one of Ecuador's 30 active volcanoes.

Twenty years ago, when I was here, blowing through town on a two-day stopover, the city, tired and dirty, was lingering on life support. Ecuador's currency, the sucre, was nearly worthless. Since then the patient has recovered. On March 13, 2002, Ecuador adopted the U.S. dollar, stabilizing the economy. Today, the heart of the old city has been scrubbed and painted, its buildings restored or hidden behind convincing facades.

Abundant lighting illuminates the cobblestone streets at night, trash vanishes in a twinkling, and public squares sport benches, grass and flowers. Purse-snatching in the old quarter disappeared overnight when the streets were converted to pedestrian traffic only from dusk to dawn. Looking down out of my hotel room after dinner, I could see and hear couples and families walking past.

As for history, we found it in Independence Square, where old men and visitors sit in the sun at the foot of Liberty besting the snarling Spanish lion. It lives in Quito's monumental, painted, gold-swathed churches and monasteries, where — on the Sunday I was there — the pews were packed and latecomers stood in the side aisles under dark paintings of tortured saints.

But Quito was only the beginning. When I first put Ecuador on my wish list, it was the historic haciendas I wanted to visit. Originally land grants, these vast ranches boast town's famous craft market, lunch time had come and gone. Heading down the block we passed a group of teenagers in school uniforms crowded around a food stall, gulping down what looked like fast food. And whatever it was in those bowls — unidentified juicy bits — it made my mouth water.

"What is this stuff?" I asked Paul Aguilar, our guide, who after four days touring us around Ecuador was now more friend than hired help. Peering over the counter, I looked at the seller in the wrinkled apron and at the bowls of chopped ingredients. For a second I wondered

Home Care Nurse Living

Resources Home Care is looking for a dynamic, motivated Home Care ... more » illustrious family pedigrees and long traditions. Surely, I thought, the pioneers who tamed Ecuador's frontiers faced the same challenges as their North American counterparts — farmers, ranchers and plantation owners — did.

MORE »

When a friend recommended EQ Touring, a Quito and Miami-based travel outfit specializing in Ecuador, we asked for an individual trip to the haciendas near Quito, traveling on scenic country roads. Curious about Ecuador's dramatic geography — on the equator but up in the clouds — I wanted to get close to some of those ice-clad volcanoes and 13,000-foot farm fields.

The final itinerary included hacienda reservations, a car and two top-notch guides (Cynthia Cabezas in Quito and Paul Aguilar for the rest of the trip). It also included a visit to Cotopaxi Volcano national park, where you can drive to the end of the road (the climbers start here, at 15,320 feet) for a close-up look at Cotopaxi's icy, 19,460-foot summit. Our last day was saved for Otavalo.

And were the haciendas historic? Yes, but forward-looking. Both Le Cusin, founded in 1602 by Jesuits, and Hacienda Pinsaqui, founded in 1790 and still owned by the original family, felt and looked like the 18th-century white-walled, red-tiled-roof colonial compounds typical of Spanish colonies. Surrounded with flowering vines and far from noise and traffic, they'll send you back to another century.

But Le Cusin's present owner is an American who restored the buildings and updated guest rooms and cottages, adding comfort while preserving the colonial feel. The wood-paneled living room and dining hall are reminiscent of a hunting lodge, and since they serve good food, encourage long evenings. The result is a loyal cadre of guests who winter over annually, settling into spacious rooms with fireplaces and staying busy dining on good meals, riding horses, hiking, sketching, studying Spanish and taking day trips to Otavalo.

Pinsaqui Hacienda, where we stopped for a bowl of locro (cream of potato soup garnished with cheese and avocado slices), is still owned and managed by an eighth-generation family member. Could he be the person whose photo, displayed on the wall, shows him posing with his horse inside this elegant old mansion? Guests enjoying acres of lawns and spectacular views of Imbabura Volcano may find approaching cars a rude intrusion. But the presence of 30 redecorated family-sized suites, fine cuisine and guided horseback riding is the evidence that guests are welcome.

Zuleta Hacienda, originally a Jesuit property, made news in the 20th century when new owners, the Plaza-Lasso family, progenitor of two presidents of Ecuador, turned the 4,000-acre ranch into a working dairy farm and cheese creamery.

As the ranch prospered, the Plasas built out, adding a high-ceilinged living room with family bedrooms at one end and a nine guest-room wing at the other. Today the hacienda, surrounded by trees, vast green fields, and a stable full of horses, is an example of the success of modern ranch management. Guests here are enthusiastic horseback riders, hikers and nature lovers.

We spent our last day shopping in Otavalo's craft market, saving the last 10 minutes for a sprint through the produce market. Instead, we spent an hour marveling at the kinds of vegetables that local farmers can grow at high altitude.

My list, hastily jotted down, includes kale, bunches of fresh alfalfa, leafy greens, peas, a half-dozen kinds of beans, red and purple berries, four kinds of citrus, tomatoes, tree tomatoes, tubers, bags of beets, onions, dried spices, 124 varieties of potatoes and 50-pound sacks of quinoa, alfalfa grain and three kinds of corn.

I thought I knew vegetables. But it was humbling to see how few I'd tasted or could even identify. I did find those white lupine beans, though, the star of my new, fast-food addiction. Take that, McDonalds.

If you go

Flights to Quito can run from nine to 20 hours or more, depending on the airline, your departure city and the layover. We flew on TACA (a merger of four central American airlines) from Los Angeles to El Salvador, and after a 40-minute layover flew out from the very same gate. Flying through Santiago, Chile, can push the layover to seven hours.

Driving & guides: Driving on Ecuador's new highways (some still under construction) is an easy way for independent travelers to reach most larger towns and top-ten highlights. Taking rarely signed, pot-holed, back country dirt roads slows you down to 10 mph. If you're on a schedule, think about hiring a guide.

Tour companies & guides: Our English-speaking guides, who were smart, educated and upbeat, made our trip. EQTouring, which offers standard or custom itineraries, guarantees all its trip leaders. Find them at www.eqtouring.com

For EQTourism, go to >www.eqtouring.com>

Quito lodging: In Quito, we recommend two fine hotels in the historic center. The hotel La Casona de Ronda occupies a restored, completely restructured in-town residence; the larger Boutique Patio Andaluz is a new property on the footprint of a similar residence. La Casona is smaller and more intimate, with a tiny restaurant and indoor-outdoor strip of garden; the Patio Andaluz has several ground floor living rooms, second-floor balconies, Internet access stations and a spacious dining room. Both are within walking distance of the historic center's monuments, parks, restaurants and shopping. Both are within the restricted pedestrian-only area.

Haciendas: For more on the hacienda's history and lodging, go to www.haciendacusin.com; www.haciendapinsaqui.com; and www.zuleta.com

 Printable Version
 Email This
 Like
 Tweet
 Pin It

World and national news

AP PHOTOS: A photographic look back at World War I

BRAZIL BEAT: Hair apparent — new 'do for Neymar

Income gap widens as American factories shut down

Syrian army crushes rebel push near Turkish border

TIMES UNION

- News
- Local News
- Your Town
- Capitol Confidential
- Nation
- World
- Sports
- High School Sports
- Opinion

Business

- Technology
- Living
- Entertainment
- Movies
- Television
- Restaurants
- Events Calendar
- Comics
- Games

Blogs

- Weather
- Obituaries
- Births
- Weddings/Celebrations
- Photos and Video
- Archives
- 518 Life
- Women@Work
- Explore/Travel

SERVICES

- Help/Contact Us
- Copyright/Reprint
- Classroom Enrichment
- Privacy Policy
- California Privacy Rights
- Terms of Service
- Mobile site
- E-Edition
- Newsletters

HOME DELIVERY

- Newspaper Subscription
- Subscriber Services
- Deliver the Paper

MARKETPLACE

- Cars
- Jobs
- Homes
- Classifieds

Hope Fund

- Business Directory
- Shopping/Coupons
- Find&Save Local Shopping
- Purchase Photos
- Today's Print Ads
- Place an Ad
- Info for Advertisers
- Ad Choices

- Subscribe to Times Union
- Subscriber Services
- Advertise With Us
- Get TV Weekly Magazine

timesunion.com

Weather | Closings | Traffic | Help | Register | Sign In

Saturday, May 31, 2014
70°F Albany, NY
Scattered Clouds

Search  timesunion.com Businesses

Home News Sports Business Opinion Entertainment Living Blogs Jobs Real Estate Cars Classifieds Index FIND & SAVE

Local | Your Town | Capitol Confidential | Newsletters | State | Nation | World | Technology | Special Reports | School Closings | All Stories

A place to elevate your expectations

High in the Andes, Ecuador boasts dramatic landscapes, charming urban areas

By Anne Z. Cooke

Published 4:06 pm, Thursday, May 1, 2014

3 of 8

◀ PREV NEXT ▶

The Old Town area in Quito, Ecuador, features a Jesuit Church filled with gold decorations. (Steve Haggerty/MCT) ORG XMIT: 1151843

(Page 2 of 2)

When a friend recommended EQ Touring, a Quito and Miami-based travel outfit specializing in Ecuador, we asked for an individual trip to the haciendas near Quito,

0 0 0 0

Tweet Pin it

Larger | Smaller | Email This

timesunion.c

Search  times

Home News Sports Business Op

FEATURED VIDEOS

You Might Also Like

- Billionaire Leader of 'Mafia-Style' Gang Sentenced to Die
The New York Times
- Guy Fieri Lamborghini Thief Gets Life In Prison, Spy-Grade Theft Caught On Video
Motor Authority
- Kate Middleton's Bare Bum Photo Is Embarrassing but SO Fabulous
Stirring Daily

Titanic Mystery Solved with DNA Testing
Ancestry.com

Printable Version Font

traveling on scenic country roads. Curious about Ecuador's dramatic geography — on the equator but up in the clouds — I wanted to get close to some of those ice-clad volcanoes and 13,000-foot farm fields.

The final itinerary included hacienda reservations, a car and two top-notch guides (Cynthia Cabezas in Quito and Paul Aguilar for the rest of the trip). It also included a visit to Cotopaxi Volcano national park, where you can drive to the end of the road (the climbers start here, at 15,320 feet) for a close-up look at Cotopaxi's icy, 19,460-foot summit. Our last day was saved for Otavalo.

And were the haciendas historic? Yes, but forward-looking. Both Le Cusin, founded in 1602 by Jesuits, and Hacienda Pinsaqui, founded in 1790 and still owned by the original family, felt and looked like the 18th-century white-walled, red-tiled-roof colonial compounds typical of Spanish colonies. Surrounded with flowering vines and far from noise and traffic, they'll send you back to another century.

But Le Cusin's present owner is an American who restored the buildings and updated guest rooms and cottages, adding comfort while preserving the colonial feel. The wood-paneled living room and dining hall are reminiscent of a hunting lodge, and since they serve good food, encourage long evenings. The result is a loyal cadre of guests who winter over annually, settling into spacious rooms with fireplaces and staying busy dining on good meals, riding horses, hiking, sketching, studying Spanish and taking day trips to Otavalo.

Pinsaqui Hacienda, where we stopped for a bowl of loco (cream of potato soup garnished with cheese and avocado slices), is still owned and managed by an eighth-generation family member. Could he be the person whose photo, displayed on the wall, shows him posing with his horse inside this elegant old mansion? Guests enjoying acres of lawns and spectacular views of Imbabura Volcano may find approaching cars a rude intrusion. But the presence of 30 redecorated family-sized suites, fine cuisine and guided horseback riding is the evidence that guests are welcome.

Zuleta Hacienda, originally a Jesuit property, made news in the 20th century when new owners, the Plaza-Lasso family, progenitor of two presidents of Ecuador, turned the 4,000-acre ranch into a working dairy farm and cheese creamery.

As the ranch prospered, the Plazas built out, adding a high-ceilinged living room with family bedrooms at one end and a nine guest-room wing at the other. Today the hacienda, surrounded by trees, vast green fields, and a stable full of horses, is an example of the success of modern ranch management. Guests here are enthusiastic horseback riders, hikers and nature lovers.

We spent our last day shopping in Otavalo's craft market, saving the last 10 minutes for a sprint through the produce market. Instead, we spent an hour marveling at the kinds of vegetables that local farmers can grow at high altitude.

My list, hastily jotted down, includes kale, bunches of fresh alfalfa, leafy greens, peas, a half-dozen kinds of beans, red and purple berries, four kinds of citrus, tomatoes, tree tomatoes, tubers, bags of beets, onions, dried spices, 124 varieties of potatoes and 50-pound sacks of quinoa, alfalfa grain and three kinds of corn.

I thought I knew vegetables. But it was humbling to see how few I'd tasted or could even identify. I did find those white lupine beans, though, the star of my new, fast-food addiction.

timesunion.co

Search timesunio

Home News Sports Business Opi

Photo Galleries

Local photos

National photos

Weather photos

LATEST NEWS

Tour de Cure is Sunday morning

LATEST ENTERTAINMENT NEWS

Man who accosted Pitt pleads no contest to battery

Take Today's Poll

Do you think Hillary Clinton, currently aged 66, will be too old to run for President in 2016?

Take that, McDonalds.

If you go

Flights to Quito can run from nine to 20 hours or more, depending on the airline, your departure city and the layover. We flew on TACA (a merger of four central American airlines) from Los Angeles to El Salvador, and after a 40-minute layover flew out from the very same gate. Flying through Santiago, Chile, can push the layover to seven hours.

Driving & guides: Driving on Ecuador's new highways (some still under construction) is an easy way for independent travelers to reach most larger towns and top-ten highlights. Taking rarely signed, pot-holed, back country dirt roads slows you down to 10 mph. If you're on a schedule, think about hiring a guide.

Tour companies & guides: Our English-speaking guides, who were smart, educated and upbeat, made our trip. EQTouring, which offers standard or custom itineraries, guarantees all its trip leaders. Find them at www.eqtouring.com

For EQTourism, go to www.eqtouring.com

Quito lodging: In Quito, we recommend two fine hotels in the historic center. The hotel La Casona de Ronda occupies a restored, completely restructured in-town residence; the larger Boutique Patio Andaluz is a new property on the footprint of a similar residence. La Casona is smaller and more intimate, with a tiny restaurant and indoor-outdoor strip of garden; the Patio Andaluz has several ground floor living rooms, second-floor balconies, Internet access stations and a spacious dining room. Both are within walking distance of the historic center's monuments, parks, restaurants and shopping. Both are within the restricted pedestrian-only area.

Haciendas: For more on the hacienda's history and lodging, go to www.haciendacusin.com; www.haciendapinsaqui.com; and www.zuleta.com

« Previous 1 | 2

Printable Version
 Email This
 Tweet 0
 0
 Pin it 0

You Might Also Like

Saving Leilani: How a well-timed child seat inspection changed a...
State Farm

10 Slowest-Selling Cars of April
Wall St. Cheat Sheet

J. Lo's Latest Look Has Us Totally Stunned, plus More Latino Celebs...
People en Espanol

18 Funny Road Signs Worth Slowing Down For
Reader's Digest

From Around the Web

- Roy Thompson Jr., War Hero Who Played Himself in Movie, Dies at 85 \(The New York Times\)
- 15 Unbelievable Cars Still Being Made \(Auto Notebook\)
- Broke and Famous. 15 Stars That Lost It All. \(She Budgets\)
- Are You Overweight for Your Height? \(AARP\)

We Recommend

- Rents cut at 1 World Trade Center, owners say
- Correction: Kidnapping Victim Found story
- Man charged with tattooing smiley face on girl, 12
- Cracks appear on ledge at Chicago's Willis Tower
- Man holding breath in Oregon tunnel causes

Not sure
No
Yes

timesunion.co

Search timesuni

Home News Sports Business Opi