

The view on travel for boomers. Free. Monthly.
By the best writers in the travel industry.

Home \(http://www.watchboom.com/\) Featured \(http://www.watchboom.com/articles/remembering-rio\)

Archive \(http://www.watchboom.com/archive\) Contact Us \(http://www.watchboom.com/contact-us\)

Sign up for a FREE monthly subscription to WatchBoom.

Email:

Subscribe

DANUBE RIVER RISING

Story by Anne Z. Cooke; photography by Steve Haggerty/ColorWorld

River ships like the Scenic Pearl feel small when you're onboard. In fact, most of today's river ships are as long as a football field.

VILSHOFEN, Germany—Delayed at the airport in Nuremberg and thoroughly frazzled, we checked and re-checked our watches as the miles ticked by, with the Danube River and our Scenic River Cruises ship, the Pearl, nowhere to be seen.

Gunter, meanwhile, hired to drive us to the dock in Vilshofen, for a nine-day Danube cruise and long-planned family vacation, calmly fiddled with the radio, tuning in a soccer match and then a music station. Finally he switched it off and sighing thoughtfully, gazed into the rear view mirror.

"The ship is waiting," he remarked. "No worrying. Like American movies say, only rolling with the punches."

Words to live by, indeed. Arriving just as the welcome-aboard party ended, we managed a glass of champagne and a hurried handshake with Captain Gyula Toth. With the Danube at flood levels, there was no way the 167-passenger Pearl was going anywhere, not that night.

Nor was the next day wasted. Though it rained on and off, the kids kept busy exploring the ship and biking for miles along the river path while I rescheduled excursions, piano concerts and museum visits. Joining a tour of Passau, we drew a law student for a guide, an amateur historian as entertaining as he was knowledgeable. By bedtime we'd met enough people to discover that we – another passenger and I -- had attended the same high school.

As for the Danube River, molten silver by moonlight, it looked as harmless as a backyard fishpond. Until the next morning when it reared up with a roar, rising another foot, flooding towns and fields, lapping at the undersides of bridges and thwarting cruise passengers.

It was then – still docked in Vilshofen – that I noticed Captain Toth had gone to ground.

"He gave a talk our first night, but after that nothing," said New Zealander Janet Holmes, a veteran ocean cruiser, who was eager to get going. "I've always wanted to see the Danube," she said. "If they had a regular Captain's Table, like the big cruise ships do, we could ask him when we're leaving."

Once a tiny village and palace on the Moldau River (Vltava, in Czech) Cesky Krumlov could well have been the model for Disney's Magic Kingdom. Now a bustling destination for holiday makers from five continents, its narrow cobble streets are lined with dozens of gift, craft, food and souvenir shops. A full-day excursion to Cesky Krumlov is included at no extra cost on Scenic River Cruises' Danube sailings.

Hope sprang anew when Hotel Manager Miguel Rodriguez called a meeting. But when he announced that two other ships had hit a bridge, blocking our route, a muttered protest swept the lounge.

"Why can't we just leave? I paid for this and I want to go, or I want my money back," yelled a tough-looking character who said he'd been on 20 cruises and expected better. What he didn't realize was that river cruising is nothing like ocean cruising. Water levels change. The current never stops. Whirlpools gouge the river bottom, shifting sandbars. Tributaries deposit debris. Some low bridges are impassable. And the water can rise in minutes.

Or fall just as fast. A couple hours later the river levels dropped, the sun came out and the Pearl cast off, heading downstream between low mountains, beside rocky cliffs and past ancient castles and vineyards.

"It's like driving a car," said Toth when I finally found him in the bridge house, hunkered down and peering at the current. "You can't take your eyes off the road – or the river – for a minute," he said, gesturing to the first mate to take the helm while we talked. "You can't stop to look at a map, or even get a cup of coffee. I've been on the Danube for more than 20 years, from one end to the other, and there's always something new."

A slow start notwithstanding we made it to every port on the itinerary. At Passau, Regensburg and Durnstein we had a choice: to walk into town, ride the bus, join a guided tour or admire the landscape from the seat of one of the ship's electric bikes. Full and three-quarter-day bus tours went farther afield (thank you, Scenic, for the newest, plushiest, sleekest buses ever); to Salzburg (this earned a thumbs down as too far and too many tourists) and to Cesky Krumlov, in the Czech Republic.

Vienna offered a variety of choices, ranging from sightseeing and the Lipizzaner horses to museums and a piano recital at the Liszt Music School. Our dressiest evening added a touch of class, with wine and an opera recital at the Palais Liechtenstein. On-ship events included a Viennese waltz performance and beginners' lesson, and a folk dance group and band.

The kids immediately invented a competitive "spot-the-ships" game that awarded points for each sighting, a list that included Tauck Tours' "Joy," A-Rosa's "Silva" and "Bella," Ama's "Prima," Scenic's "Jasper," the "Jane Austen," Emerald's "Sky," Prinzessin's "Sisi," two Uniworld ships (we missed the names) and three Viking River Cruises' ships.

From a basket of memorable moments, I'd pick Durnstein for history and Cesky Krumlov for crafts. Built on steep terraces, tiny Durnstein is unique. But its stand-out feature is the hike uphill to the ruined castle on the rocks. For me, seeing the place where in 1192, England's King Richard I, returning home from the Third Crusade, was imprisoned for two years, put the Crusades on the map.

In Cesky Krumlov, our sunny day wandering through this 13th century restored Czech hamlet, soon became a Tiffany-meets-Disneyland with dozens of sparkly stores on cobblestone streets. Built astride the Moldau River and bypassed by every major war, the town is now a designated UNESCO Heritage site, making it (for all you film location managers reading this) a set just waiting for a story.

Talking to Toth about working with Scenic Cruises produced another surprise. On the Danube, captains have just one task: steering.

"Our union rules don't permit us to do anything except navigate," he said. "My duty is to deliver the ship and the passengers safely and on schedule." He paused and thought it over. "See them, over there? That's why steering is harder than it used to be," he said, waving to three cruise vessels going the other way, each with a different outfit. "There are dozens of cruise ships now, and more on the way."

The result is a critical shortage of experienced employees, from cruise directors down to dining room waiters. Forced to hire beginners, service levels now vary from ship to ship.

A few travelers couldn't avoid comparisons. "We booked it because it's advertised as a luxury cruise," said Richard Holway, Chairman of TechMarketView, a UK firm. "But not by our standards. We're very disappointed. The cabin and excursions are fine enough, certainly. But the service doesn't compare with Silver Seas, where the staff greet you by name, ask after you every day and your waiter keeps an eye on you throughout the meal. These fellows don't even notice when you try to get their attention."

But most passengers gave it an enthusiastic thumbs up. The fact that the waiters, new hires from Romania and Bulgaria, were inattentive, didn't matter. They were thrilled to be vacationing on a famous river and fascinated by new places and cultures. They liked the meals and praised the all-inclusive pricing. Even disappointed travelers eventually softened up.

"We've had a very good time," said Janice Holmes who had to move from one cabin to another when a mystery leak soaked her rug, not once but twice. "These things happen but you can't let it bother you," she said, waving goodbye. Words to live by, for sure.

THE NITTY GRITTY

Contact Scenic River Cruises, an Australian company, at 857-201-0878. Or go to www.scenic.au (<http://www.scenic.au>) for more information and prices.

A classic cliff-side pile overlooking a slight bend in the Danube, this castle, not far from the 18th C. Benedictine Abbey and Library at Melk, was identified by the ship's crew as Schonbuhel Schloss (Castle). Built atop a rock fronting the river, it's invincible from below and enjoys clear views up and down the Danube. Unlike many ruined castles along the Danube, Schonbuhel has survived intact. Near Melk, Austria.

River banks and barges, castles and churches, meadows and marshes, all are photo opportunities for passengers on the Scenic Pearl's eight-day romantic Danube River Cruise. Seen here, the countryside at mid-day, in Austria.

Each summer evening in Budapest, as the sun sets, exterior lights illuminate the buildings along the Danube, a must-see spectacle celebrated by river cruises, late-night parties, riverside restaurants and visitors from around the world. Passengers on Scenic Cruises' ship Pearl celebrate with cocktails and a lazy tour along the shore. Here, they look over the river at Chain Bridge, built in the 19th century to link the cities of Buda and Pest.

The Pearl and the Ruby, sister ships, sail in 2017 on the Rhine and Moselle. A newer ship, the Jade, sails on the Danube between Nuremberg and Budapest on June 5 and 12. Category D cabins start at $4180 per person for two in a cabin and include a fly-free option for one airline ticket.

For some perspective on the size of the Danube as it passes Budapest, and a view of the dozens of river cruise ships that visit this major European capital city, join one of the excursions offered by Scenic River Cruises' that include city views from Gellert Hill, behind above the city. Budapest, Hungary.

Featured (<http://www.watchboom.com/articles/remembering-rio>)

| Archive (<http://www.watchboom.com/archive>)

| Contact Us (<http://www.watchboom.com/contact-us>)

Copyright © 2017 Unleaded Group. Website design and development by Unleaded Group \(http://www.unleadedsoftware.com/\)